From the Office of Greg Biga

To Whom It May Concern,

I am writing this letter on behalf of the Bennett High School Library. Our library is one of the most progressive entities I have seen in an academic setting. Our media director, Casey Veatch, is an innovative force who has guided a small school and rural library into a premier educational hub.

Our library uses cutting edge technology with innovative tools to teach information literacy. This includes information technology trainings for teachers, students, and parents. Building this fully-rounded educational experience has allowed for collaborative lesson building among teachers at Bennett High School.

The Bennett High School Library is the creator of the first Information MASTERY program in the nation, which is infused with our STEM program. This cutting edge practice allows for a high level of wisdom and knowledge to be gained through hands-on educational experiences.

Casey Veatch has presented Information MASTERY on the national stage at the New Leaf in Education conference in Chicago, and at the New England Technology, Education and Design conference in New York. Mr. Veatch and the Bennett High School Library have been recognized, published and or rewarded by the Library Journal, the American Library Association, the American School Library Association, the Library of Congress, Colorado Congressman Jared Polis, and by the Apple Corporation.

It is due to this extraordinary example of excellence that I recommend the Bennett High School Library to you for all due consideration.

Sincerely,
